

What's happening, gang?!

This week saw quite a few shakeups in college football and just as man in the Stats Game! Overall, our scores were much worse than week 1 (We'll all figure that out), but still a lot of good stuff happening.

Here's where we stand after Week 2:

Player	Rank	Total Score	Pts. From 1st
Brian	1	-552.0
Chapa	2	195.0	747.0
Spencer	3	293.0	845.0
Jacob	4	363.0	915.0
Logan	5	1,022.0	1,574.0
Mike G.	6	1,030.0	1,582.0
Dario	7	1,139.0	1,691.0
Mike M.	8	1,146.0	1,698.0
Sam	9	1,319.0	1,871.0
Jackson	10	1,402.0	1,954.0
Hollie	11	1,484.0	2,036.0
Marc	12	1,648.0	2,200.0
Grant	13	1,943.0	2,495.0
Ian	14	2,143.0	2,695.0
Moni	15	2,194.0	2,746.0

Remaining in first place, Brian had a week highlighted by Evan Stewart's performance for Oregon vs. Boise State Saturday night. His 112 yards and 1 touchdown helped the Ducks squeak by the Broncos despite how many Aggie fans in general (or maybe the Aggie fans playing the Stats Game) want to see him fail. On another note, nobody picked Ashton Jeanty this week? Were we too scared he was playing a good team? 192 yards and 3 touchdowns! The guy is great against everyone. Also, did Jason Henderson play this week?

Chapa stays in second despite having a ROUGH week. Does anyone know what happened to Harrison Wallace III. Week 1 he was the new star in Penn State's offense, and this week, he doesn't log a single catch? Did he play? Chapa also got hit with the injury bug as Cam Rising goes down with a hand injury. Fun fact, Utah didn't score a single point after he got injured.

Spencer jumps up to third place after one of the better performances of the week. I love me a tackler who can get me TWENTY tackles, and that's exactly what Mississippi State's Isaac Smith did against Arizona State. But despite this, Spencer also picked Harrison Wallace II which hurts his score significantly.

I, as always, had the best week. Nah, I actually had a pretty bad one. My QB, John Mateer (Wazzou), had more rushing yards (197) than passing yards (115), so if I had picked him as my rusher, I'd be rolling in negative points.

But nevertheless, I did not. I was also one of a few people who picked Louisville's Isaac Brown as my rusher, and as Jackson so eloquently put it on Saturday night, "5 different players on Louisville scored rushing tds, not my guy."

Logan rocketed up 5 spots into fifth place this week driven mostly by Jaxson Dart's -57 points (I swear Lane Kiffin is trying to get Dart an invite to New York for the Heisman Ceremony). Logan also picked Ollie Gordon (good) in a game in which it appeared Mike Gundy forgot how to run the ball (bad), so honestly that kind of sucks.

Mikey G. also shot up 5 spots this week with the best score of the week (232 points). Three of his four players had negative scores. The only blemish for him was Bru McCoy's whopping 10 yards against NC State. Other than that, Kyle McCord, Quinton Cooley, and Trey Rucker did pretty awesome.

My man, Dario, dropped down to sixth place with three pretty underwhelming picks. Deion Burks (and the Oklahoma offense as a whole) decided to basically take the night off against Houston. Utah RB, Dijon Stanley, only ran for 16 yards, and SMU's Isaiah Nwokobia, only had 4 tackles. I feel a bounce back week..

Kamdyn Benjamin had himself a nice little receiving game (131 yards and 1 touchdown) for Mike M. this week. The rest of his picks decided to avoid the endzone this week. How does Kaidon Salter (Liberty QB) get ZERO touchdowns against New Mexico State? Heck, how does Liberty almost lose to New Mexico State? What a weird week.

Sam, what's the first rule of Fight Club? We don't talk about Fight Club. What's the second rule of Fight Club? We DON'T talk about Fight Club? Well, what's the first rule of the Stats Game? We don't pick players that are playing FCS teams. Stephen F. Austin is a proud member of the Southland Conference which is very competitive and fun if you're into that, but it doesn't count when you pick players playing them here.

Jackson is another one that picked Louisville's touchdownless running back this week. Just really unlucky here. The rest of his picks also leave some room for improvement. I mean Tre Harris is really good and who knew Drew Allar (and Penn State as a whole) would struggle against Bowling Green. Just a weird week all around.

Once again, Hollie is really just here for pictures of dogs (I included Dubs in sunglasses just for her). Jaxson Dart did great, but she also had Tahj Brooks who didn't play due to injury.

Marc had one of his worst weeks in maybe years. I don't know. We'll have to check that, but to make up for it, he's the only person to send me his Week 3 picks already, so I truly appreciate that.

Grant is starting his miraculous comeback now as he jumps up to 13th. One of the better performances this week led by Jalen Milroe and Alabama's way-too-close-for-comfort-despite-the-final-score game vs USF. Guys, I think Alabama might have a few real problems this year. It's worth monitoring.

Ian was extra Colorado heavy this week despite Colorado playing a decent defense in Nebraska. Shilo Sanders broke his arm, Shedeur had -30 rushing yards (doesn't affect his score as a passer but does illustrate how much he was running for his life despite Nebraska not blitzing at all), and Travis Hunter was kept out of the end zone. He also picked Marquez Cooper who recently claimed he was better than Ashton Jeanty and I will not tolerate any sort of nonsense like that!

Moni was picking family as cousin Owen pissed down his own leg against Texas State this week. Pairing McCuin and McCown definitely didn't work for either her nor UTSA. It also doesn't help that she also picked Ollie Gordon in a game in which Gundy refused to run the ball.

As always, I look forward to this weekend's games. Don't forget to send me your picks, and enjoy the little sampling of College Football's Chaotic Energy below!

Peace!

