

Let's get right into it, since I was at a wedding and saw very little football this past Saturday (maybe a good thing based on the final score of the Aggie game). We have a NEW LEADER in the clubhouse this week!

Rankings by Week

Yours truly has officially taken over the top spot after creeping up the standings the past few weeks led by my main man (I have lots of main men), CAM SCATTEBO and his -206 points. Honestly, everyone else was mediocre to bad for me, but it worked out just well enough this week.

Sam has been climbing the ranks nearly every single week all season, and this week is no different. Dylan Sampson (Tennessee RB) and Josh Hoover (TCU QB) both got him negative points. If not for Jerjuan Newton and his 38 total yards, Sam would/could very well be in first place right now.

Brian has been holding down the top spot every week this year up to this point. Not a bad week at all (See: Cam Scattebo), but Marques Watson-Trent (Georgia Southern LB) didn't log any stats. Do we know if he was hurt or anything? Getting named to the Mid-Season All-Sun Belt team and then getting zero tackles seems weird unless he was hurt.

Mike G is another one who has been steadily climbing most of the season. Cousin Owen had 280 yards and 4 touchdowns, while another Cam Scattebo pick ensured the best score of the week (147 points)*. I will say it's a bold strategy to pick Colin Ramos (Navy) in a non-Army/Navy game, but he's not the only one who's done that this year.

Prior to me realizing I messed up Spencer's score (see below)*

Logan seems to have leveled off a little bit and is playing some of his best ball of the year right now. RJ Harvey DOMINATED Arizona with 184 yards and 3 touchdowns, while Dillon Gabriel registered 26 points in an apparent demolition of Michigan.

Full disclosure here guys, I got to Spencer's blurb and realized he wasn't getting any credit for his Quarterback, so I had to go back and update the pivot tables and change the images up top (and hope it didn't change the standings too much). He jumped ahead of Logan, but I'm leaving the blurbs in original place order. Anyways, Kurtis Rourke is awesome. RJ Harvey crushed it. Jack Bech had a big game.

Jackson had a solid week led by Kaleb Johnson and the new high flying Iowa Hawkeyes offense. Plus, his tackler, Mansoor Delane (Virginia Tech) had six tackles and an interception, which is real nice. If we didn't have a Jerjuan Newton no show, this week could've been even bigger.

Chapa, I think we need to change up the vibes around your season. You started SO hot, but have been steadily declining each week. Another victim of the Marques Watson-Trent mystery combined with poor games from both Jeremiah Smith (pretty shocking tbh) and Justice Ellison gave you the dreaded comma in your weekly score.

Hollie had maybe one of the more uneventful, for lack of a better word, weeks with her picks. AJ Turner and Andrew Armstrong got 202 and 130 points – total average. Colin Ramos (another risky Navy pick) was fine too.

Grant's ascent to the top is back on track after a really good 317 point week. It's a little disappointing when DIEGO PAVIA underperforms for you, but at least Dylan Sampson and Jack Bech rocked it. All is good.

Mike M! No picks this week?!

Marc, I think the best part of your picks was when you called the “Ole Piss.” Pretty meh all around.

Dario, what happened? TWO picks that you’ve already picked this year! Diego Pavia as a rusher(!) and Jack Bech. You’re better than that.

Moni had a similar week to Hollie in that I don’t really know what to say to it. Sorry, I’ll think of more to add next time.

I think we might’ve lost Ian here. Two weeks in a row without picks (but he did send me the $10 so I’m appreciative of that).
