

What's goin' on, gang?!

How about those games this past weekend?! From Boise State (and former Texas Aggie, Chris Marshall) laying an egg as people were still at work, Tay Tay showing up to a Nebraska/Cincinnati game that was spiritually a Big Ten West game, Haynes King putting the team on his back like Greg Jennings on a Friday night at the same time Baylor forgot that quarterbacks can run the ball, to Tarleton disrespecting the troops, to Saturday morning Lee Corso tributes, and Arch Manning throwing the ball like Uncle Rico all day (alright no joke here, but WHY were his mechanics so different from last year – that's weird). Is Alabama Booty Butt? My toddler thinks so. Garrett Nussmeier looked like a top qb, South Carolina has three aliens on its roster. Is Miami back? Did Notre Dame forget they could run the ball? And is Bill Belichick washed?

I know that was incoherent rambling, but I got pumped revisiting the weekend. Anyways, here's where we stand after Week 1.

Rank	Player	Score	Pts. From 1st
1	Mike M.	408	0
2	Ian	468	60
3	Mike G.	563	155
4	Moni	684	276
5	Spencer	685	277
6	Jackson	713	305
7	Jacob	729	321
8	Dario	747	339
9	Chapa	792	384
10	Brian	884	476
11	Sam	939	531
12	Jonathan	995	587
13	Logan	1,011	603
14	Marc	1,094	686
15	Chris	1,103	695
16	Hollie	1,153	745
17	Grant	1,600	1,192

Did anyone have a better weekend than Mike M.? I mean I don't know for sure, but not only was he in Vegas this weekend, he also had the best week out of any of us! And really, who's to say which is better out of the two? Jonah Williams TURNED OUT late Saturday night with 177 rushing yards and two touchdowns.

Ian was pretty certain he was not last place. He was also pretty certain he was not first place. Fairly accurate actually. Despite only picking players in the Maryland/FAU game for some ungodly reason, Maryland's Daniel Wingate's 10 tackles and a pick six REALLY helps the overall score here.

Nothing against Mike G. here, but I usually have to go a little further down the standings to find a set of picks that doesn't stand out in the slightest. All four picks were solid to good, but nothing under 100 points (and maybe more importantly, nothing over 200 points). Talk about consistency. Maybe that's sort of indicative of our scores as a whole this week. Seems like all of us were a little off – or there was not top end scorers this week.

The all Aggie picks finally sort of paid off as Moni settles into the fourth spot. For those uninitiated or those that need a reminder, there is a long standing rule in place that YOU DO NOT PICK AGGIE PLAYERS. They will always let you down. Well Marcel Reed and KC Concepcion tore it up, and if Le'Veon Moss wasn't on a snap count, who knows what his numbers would be? If only she had picked Taurean York instead of Will Lee as the tackler.

Spencer, I hope you know you deserve the 250 points Anthony Hill, the traitor originally committed to Texas A&M and now a Longhorn, got you. But actually, looking at your picks, what happened to Nicholas Singleton? 19 yards but 2 touchdowns? I didn't get eyes on this game, but that feels weird if they only used him in like goal-to-go situations.

Little ol' Gunnar Stockton lit it up for Jackson against Marshall with two tuddies through the air and two on the ground, and like Spencer, Jackson got the weird Singleton line here as well.

My boy, Red Murdock, saved My week with an insane SIXTEEN tackles. Ryan Williams sucked. Bryson Washington (Baylor) sucked. I hate that Dylan Raiola (Patrick MaApartments) was my next best player.

My main man, Dario, would've had a better (top 3-4) week if he also wasn't a traitor and picked an average edge rusher in Colin Simmons (I know he's not average and he's really good but let me have this). Also, kudos on the balls to pick a true freshman quarterback. That wasn't too shabby.

Walker Eget and kind of a lot of junk. That's how I'd describe Chapa's week. Not related to this game, but I did run into Chapa at a Starbucks on Sunday RIGHT BEFORE MY KID THREW UP EVERYWHERE IN THERE! Bro, why are toddlers sick all the time?! Anyways, not a lot of Stat Game numbers you'd like from the Penn State running backs, huh?

So you're telling me that two of the better, more well-known players in their positions got Brian 340 and 350 points? What were Ryan Williams and Whit Weeks doing this weekend besides getting some fresh air and exercise?

We had to wait to get this completely updated for Mr. Champion, Sam, because he picked Josh Hoover playing against Chapel Hill. And honestly, good call. UNC was TERRIBLE. But that's basically cancelled out by Penn State's Devonte Ross and his 4 receiving yards. Did Penn State suck this week or did they just play basically a Spring scrimmage?

Pretty rough go for our newbie, Jonathan, having picked a Penn State RB (whom we established was nonsense this week), Whit Weeks (whom we established didn't do anything), Bryce Underwood (whom we established is a pretty good pick for a true freshman), and Elijah Saratt (an Indiana receiver in a game in which Indiana struggled to pull away). It gets better. I promise. Actually I don't. There's always a chance it gets way worse, but it's a long season.

I've decided we all picked entirely too many Penn State players. Logan got two of them! I'm really close to making a no Penn State players rule.

Remember when I said Chapa's picks were Walker Eget and kind of a lot of junk. Well take that exact idea and make the junk way worse. Those are Marc's picks. Walker Eget had 32 points. The other three picks didn't do better than 350 points. Plus he also picked Colin Simmons, and we all know how I feel about picking Longhorns.

Our current leader wasn't the only one in Vegas for the weekend. Chris submitted his picks from the Craps table (I don't know if that's true, but I like to imagine that's how it went). Unfortunately, we got Drew Allar (Penn State) and Le'Veon Moss' snap count (unofficial snap count by the way). That really derailed the week, but I hope you won some money!

The first person to get bit by the injury bug was my lovely wife, Hollie, who had Antonio Williams against LSU. Unfortunately, he was hurt before recording a single stat, so we have our first 400 point week! Hell yeah.

Lastly, Grant didn't make picks. That might be the earliest in a season we've seen someone fold. I'll confirm he still wants to play. Maybe he's just giving us all a chance. I mean he has one back to back titles as recently as 2023. But between last year's results and the start of this year, he's having Gene Chizick Auburn levels of falling off a cliff.

A few housekeeping notes. Please let me know if you are having difficulties with the app. I'm not in IT, but I can at least attempt to help.

Also, when submitting your form this week, you'll notice that for each of the players' names, it is now a dropdown menu (instead of free text). I did this to ensure names match the data I pull, so it cuts down on my manual double checking of everything. The list currently only has players that recorded a stat in Week 1. If a player, say Noah Thomas for no particular reason, didn't have a single, tangible impact on the game despite playing arguably the worst FBS team, his name wouldn't be on this list. At the bottom, you'll see the option "Other (Text Me)." As the season goes on, and more players register stats, this list will become more comprehensive.

Lastly, if you have not sent me your $10, please do so as soon as you can. As a reminder, the payouts are as follows:

1st Place: $110

2nd Place: $30

3rd Place: $10

Bowl Season Winner: $20

