Yo yo yo!
Apparently A&M's problem was me caring too much.
The very first week after I publicly accepted that A&M sucks and achieved complete emotional peace, they beat Arkansas 34-7. Nice try. I know what this is. They saw me moving on and decided to send a "hey stranger" text.
I will not be sucked back in.
Probably.
But in reality, I don't think that game changes how I feel about this team.

Elsewhere, Missouri beat Florida 45-17 one week after Florida looked unstoppable, Alabama beat Mississippi State 56-23, Miami destroyed Clemson, Wake Forest beat Stanford FIFTY-SEVEN TO THREE (shoutout Gio Lopez), and Purdue beat Illinois because college football makes absolutely no sense.

More importantly, here's where we stand in the Stat Game:

Rank	Player	Score	Pts. From 1st
1	Sam	1,741	0
2	Logan	2,172	431
3	Jacob	2,797	1,056
4	Dario	2,917	1,176
5	Jackson	2,976	1,235
6	Brian	2,990	1,249
7	Mike G.	3,083	1,342
8	Chris	3,096	1,355
9	Spencer	3,327	1,586
10	Marc	3,362	1,621
11	Hollie	4,350	2,609

Sam maintains first place after a solid 472-point week. Nothing approached last week's historic four-negative-pick performance, but Dylan Riley had 100 total yards and two touchdowns for 14 points, while Collin Dixon had 131 total yards and a touchdown for 68.
Katin Houser was decent with 267 total yards and two touchdowns. The only real disappointment was MarcAnthony Parker recording five tackles in the most important competition in college football: The Commander-in-Chief's Trophy Series.
Sam's lead shrank from 726 points to 431, but he remains the man to beat.

Logan had the best score of the week with 177 points and significantly closed the gap on first place. Jesse Legree was RIDICULOUS (again, btw. Have y'all watched this kid – or Oregon State in general? He's awesome!) with 156 receiving yards and THREE touchdowns for -212 points. Dylan Riley gave him another 14, and Jayden Maiava was at least decent despite USC's offense struggling against Washington. Robert Woodyard Jr. only recording six tackles prevented Logan from going negative for the whole week, but I doubt he's too upset. Another week like this and we could have our fifth different leader of the season.

Guys, I might be good at this game. I can't quite prove it yet, but that's a theory I'm workshopping.
Gio Lopez had 353 total yards and FIVE touchdowns while Wake Forest murdered Stanford. That got me -75 points. Blake Fletcher added 10 tackles in Air Force's win over Navy.
Torrance Burgess Jr. and Carlos Hernandez were both fine but not spectacular. Still, 547 points was enough to jump me from fifth to third.
I was in last place after Week 1, so I'd like everyone to ignore the fact that I'm still more than 1,000 points behind Sam and focus exclusively on the words "third place."

Dario drops from third to fourth after being attacked by the injury gods. C.J. Carr had five total touchdowns against North Carolina for -4 points, and Collin Dixon added another 68. Jadan Baugh, however, followed up last week's 142-yard, three-touchdown performance with 30 total yards and zero touchdowns. That's a 558-point swing from the same player in consecutive weeks.
Now to the bad: Kingston Lopa.
Lopa entered the weekend leading the ENTIRE COUNTRY with five interceptions while also leading Cal with 27 tackles. An objectively fantastic tackler pick.
He then suffered an upper-body injury less than three minutes into the game and never returned.
Full 400 points.
There was absolutely nothing wrong with the pick. Dario just got Stat Gamed.

Jackson falls one spot to fifth after Jadan Baugh's disappearing act got him 374 points. Kamario Taylor was a really good passer pick with 258 yards and three touchdowns against Alabama, while Collin Dixon continued his productive afternoon. Travis Anderson only recorded five tackles, though, so Jackson finished with 769 points and now sits 14 points ahead of Brian. We have a legitimate traffic jam developing here. Only 299 points separate third through eighth.

Brian made the biggest jump of the week, moving from ninth to sixth behind the third-best weekly score.

Josh Hoover threw four touchdowns for 29 points, and Cam Cook ran for 142 yards and two touchdowns for -84. Carlos Hernandez and Korey Smith weren't spectacular, but they didn't have to be.
Brian is now only 193 points away from third place, which is nothing. That's one average tackler performance or one Jadan Baugh emotional roller coaster.

Mike G. stays in seventh after a very Mike G. week. Ryan Browne threw for 255 yards and one touchdown. Torrance Burgess Jr. had 90 total yards. Collin Dixon had his 131 yards and a touchdown. Brandon Tucker Jr. recorded seven tackles.No disasters. No cheat codes. No injuries. No duplicates. Just four functional football players combining for 654 points. Honestly, that level of normalcy feels strange around here.

Chris falls from sixth to eighth, and we need to have a conversation.
Anthony Colandrea had 346 total yards and three touchdowns, Collin Dixon was great, and Kendrick Raphael scored a touchdown for SMU. Perfectly decent start.
Then Chris selected Kyngstonn Viliamu-Asa as his tackler. Kyngstonn had three tackles AND an interception, which would have been worth 125 points. Pretty good!
One tiny issue: Chris already picked him in Week 1.

DUPLICATE!

The best part is that Kyngstonn didn't play when Chris selected him the first time, so that pick also received the full 400 points. I have texts proving Chris paid attention and was PISSED.
Chris has now received EIGHT HUNDRED POINTS from selecting the exact same player twice.
Incredible stuff.

Spencer had the second-best week and finally started climbing, moving from tenth to ninth.
Jayden Maiava and Dylan Riley combined for 139 points, Joseph Williams had 93 receiving yards and a touchdown, and Nicholas Rodriguez recorded 11 tackles.

Marc drops from eighth to tenth despite finding one of the best receivers of the week. Anthony Evans III had 166 receiving yards and two touchdowns against Alabama for -132 points. Unfortunately, everyone else kinda sucked. Davis Warren threw for 136 yards and zero touchdowns in Stanford's 57-3 loss to Wake Forest. Jadan Baugh gave Marc the full 374-point experience, and Chris Cole recorded four tackles against Vanderbilt. Evans did everything he could, but one man can only carry so much garbage.

Lastly, Hollie finished with the worst score for the second consecutive week (oof! Who's giving her advice? They must be an idiot!). John Alan Richter was okay with 213 total yards and a touchdown. Jaylin Carter had 84 total yards. Riley Neer caught 21 yards, and Anthony Palano recorded three tackles.
No single pick reached 400, but nothing was better than 169. She scored 1,100 points and is now 2,609 points behind Sam.

A few other observations:

Five people picked Collin Dixon this week, and all five received 68 points. Three people used Dylan Riley and received 14. Three people picked Jadan Baugh and deeply regretted it.

Also, through five weeks, we've had injuries, FCS mistakes, wrong teams, and two duplicates. Please search the app before making your picks. I don't want to say Spencer and Chris are setting a bad example, but Spencer and Chris are setting a bad example.

Don't forget to send me your Week 6 picks, and good luck this weekend!

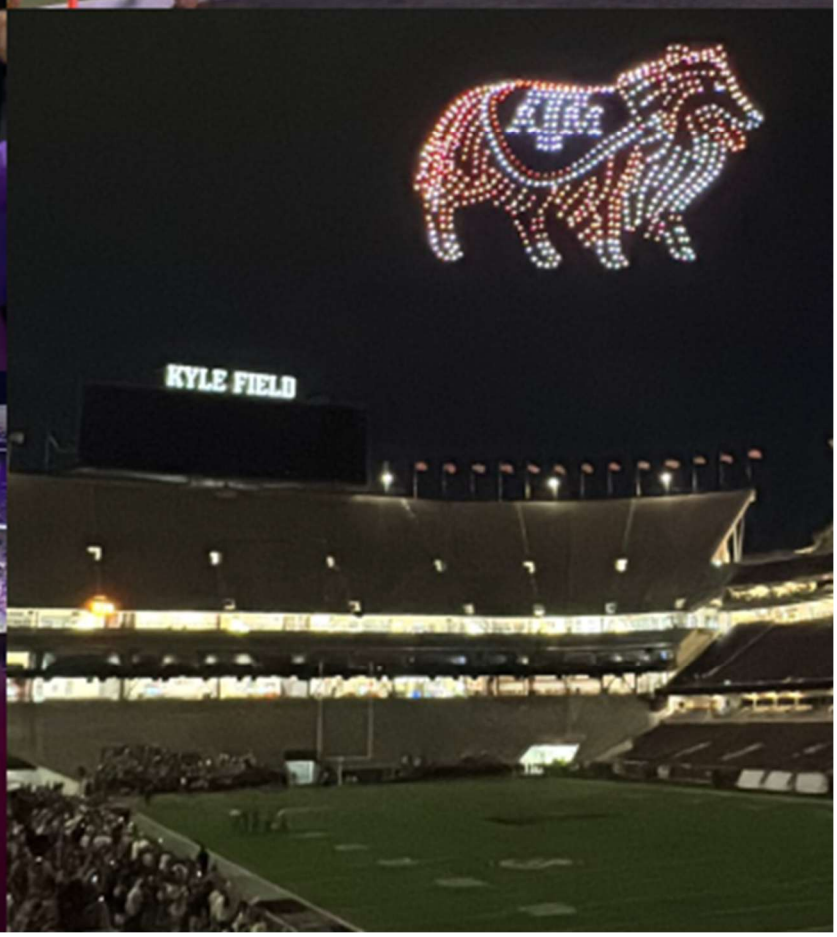

35
11:02
26

KYLE FIELD

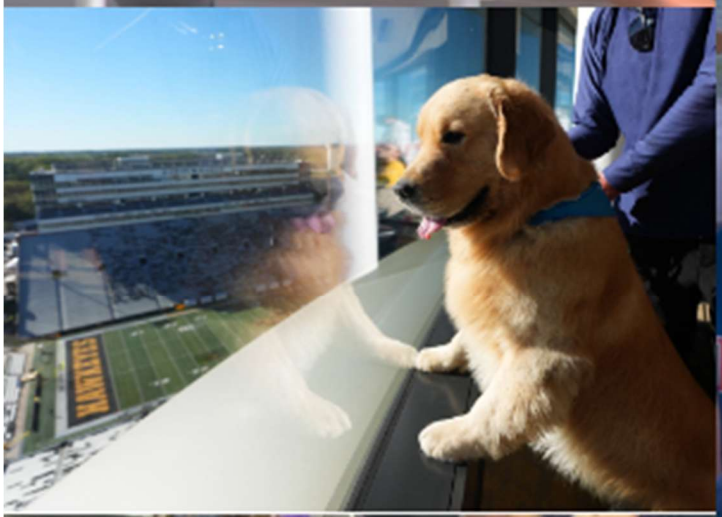

48
23

6
0
1st | 13:18

7
11:48
6

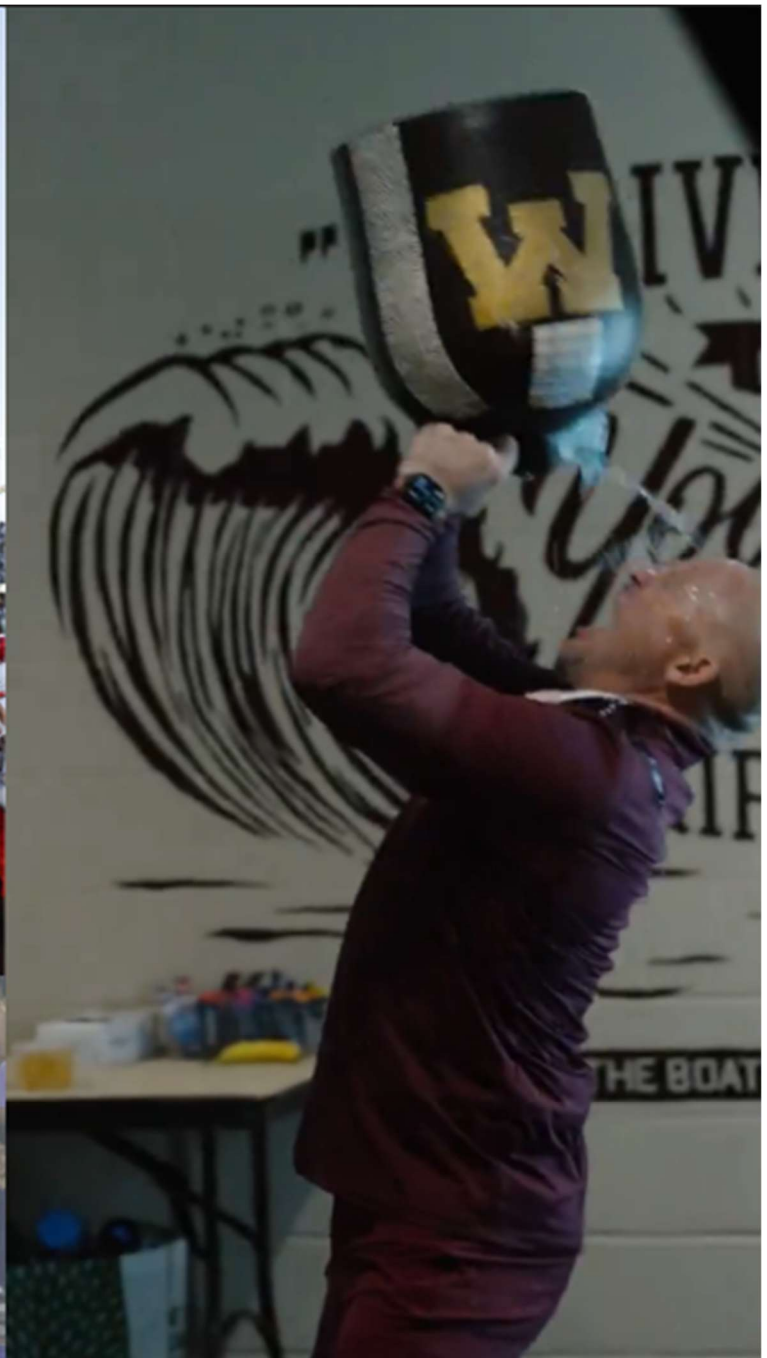

FLORIDA
10
4TH DOWN
14:04
38
25 MISSOURI

FIRE

KENTUCKY WILDCATS
Largest road comeback win in program history
Trailed 17-0 in 2nd QTR

TURNOVER
BEAVS
36
24

THE BOAT

CJKSH
#CJK5H
1ST & 10
7
2:00
0
TCU

PURDUE
PURDUE

FLAG
MIAMI
17
2ND :18
3

SHUT
THE FUCK UP
KENTUCKY
63
COPYRIGHT 2026 - THE BIG 12 CONFERENCE, INC.
TEXAS TECH
4-3
29
7
COLORADO
5-2
4TH 1:58 23 3RD & 3