

Yoooo everyone!

What's happening on this fine Wednesday?! How'd everyone enjoy the OFF week? And yes, I'm aware not everyone playing this game is an Aggie like me, but I will never apologize for not stressing out on a CFB weekend! This one was a really fun one between Tulsa beating Oklahoma State on Friday (and Mike Gundy being fired 1 day after the 18th anniversary of his "I'm a Man" rant), Indiana whipping the SHIT out of Illinois (this Indiana team looks better than last year's playoff team in my opinion), Oklahoma CHEATING to beat Auburn (but also their QB had a broken hand most of the game so that's kinda cool), Texas Tech showing proof of concept of their roster against Utah, Missouri running for a billion yards against South Carolina, Arkansas literally fumbling away the game at the 5 yard line, Dabo showing that he's washed against Syracuse, the last Iron Skillet for the foreseeable future, the Apple Cup, and a kind of bananas Big 12 game between Arizona State and Baylor.

After all that craziness, here's where we stand in the actually important stuff:

Rank	Player	Score	Pts. From 1st

📊 Rankings by Week

Dario stays being the best this week with a pretty good week overall led mostly by UTSA's Robert Henry's -88 points (definitely not the only one who picked this guy) and now-injured, Steve Angeli against Clemson. I'll be honest, that was a bold pick, and it paid off.

I picked the wrong TCU WR (Jordan Dwyer – I should've picked Eric McAllister), but all my other picks were really solid. Robert Henry, obviously, but also Colorado State's Owen Long and the highest paid quarterback in the country. Any guesses before you look at who that is?

Brian moves up to third place after complaining to me that he hates this game because he sucks, but he had the second best week out of anyone. Again, Robert Henry's -88 points, Red Murdock's -100 points, and Joey Aguilar's demolishing of UAB will give you a pretty good week.

I think it's very on the nose that the top four places all picked Robert Henry this week. Mike G. is no different. Combine that with Josh Hoover's big time Skillet game, and that's how you jump up into fourth place.

Despite having already picked Robert Henry this season, Moni's rusher was more than up to the challenge. Jonah Coleman got her -18 yards while former Texas A&M WR, former TCU linebacker, and current UTSA linebacker, Shad Banks had a nice week.

Spencer had the best week this week as his picks were almost identical to Brian's. Only difference is his receiver, Harrison Wallace got 4 yards receiving instead of the 3 yards receiving Brian's got.

We've got ANOTHER Robert Henry pick by Mike M. combined with a solid Sawyer Robinson performance, and that's how you move up a couple spots!

Logan might've picked the wrong quarterback in the Texas Tech/Utah game, but even if he picked Tech's starter (Behren Morton), that might've been the wrong pick too. Did y'all see Will Hammond come in and start DEALIN'. Holy cow!

Ian picked every wrong player from the Iron Skillet game. Honestly, that's an impressive feat.

Sam had his best week of the season picking Ahmad Hardy as he ran ALL OVER South Carolina and Jayden Maiava and his -24 points. What's most shocking to me is 10th place is only about 1,000 points behind 1st place right now. Tight race.

Hollie stays steady at 11th with Joey Aguilar and Owen Long doing most of the heavy lifting. She, like Ian and me, picked the wrong receiver in the Iron Skillet.

Jackson picked Taylen Green as a rusher, which I love in theory, but unfortunately, it didn't totally work out this week. But Steve Angeli with a pretty solid one helps out a lot.

Jonathan had two awesome picks, Oregon's Dante Moore, and Michigan's Justice Haynes (combined -23 points), but also two not-so-great picks. Malachi Toney never got it going against Florida and Anthony Hill (TRAITOR) only had 2 tackles.

Marc, I don't know how to say this without sounding mean because it's really not a bad thing, but I have nothing to say about your picks. Just entirely boring across the board.

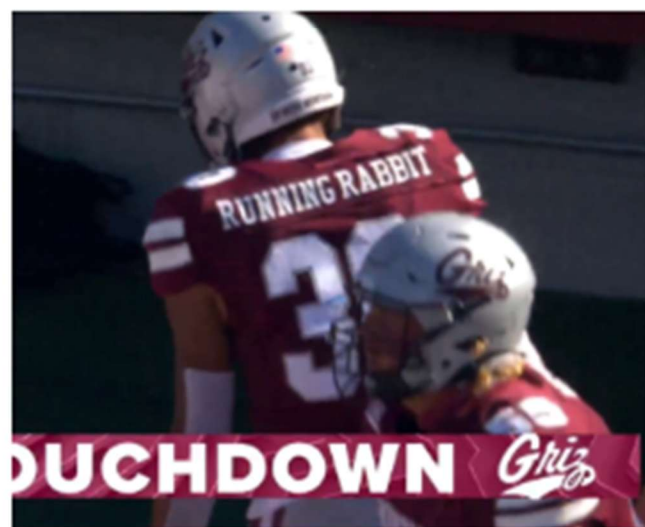

Chris! You literally asked me if you could pick Maverick McIlvor again, I said no, and you still picked Maverick McIlvor! WTH

I think we lost Chapa this year.
