

Yo! Alright, part one of two separate recaps. Let's see if I can remember what happened nearly 3 weeks ago. Texas A&M got Brian Kelly fired, Indiana SMOKED "3-0" UCLA, Bama escaped South Carolina, Vanderbilt and Missouri played a game we'd all call "terrible football" if the logos were, say Minnesota and Iowa, UNC ALMOST got their first P4 win against Virginia, Memphis completes a bananas comeback against USF similar to Texas completing a bananas comeback against Mississippi State. Wake Forest kicks a walk off kick to beat SMU 13-12 and Auburn gets its first SEC win (I'm sure I'll touch on Hugh Freeze "next week") and Utah stuffs Deion in a locker.

Rankings by Week

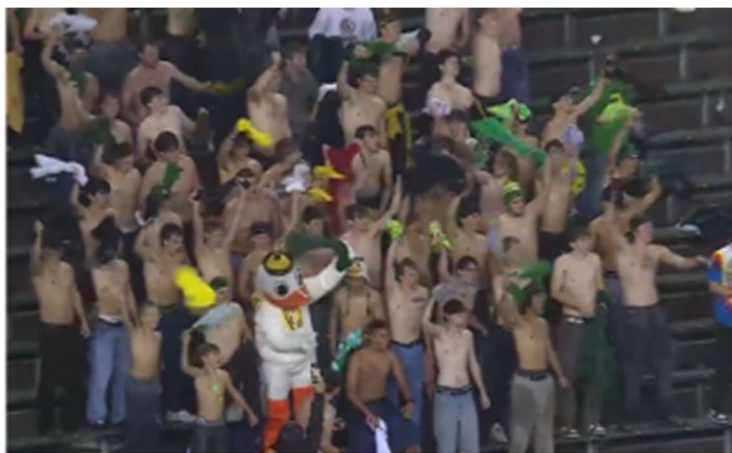

Dario stays winning despite his worst week of the season. It doesn't look like Ian Strong played for Rutgers, but I'm not quite sure what happened there.

We had a couple people pick duplicates this week. Chris is dominating the duplicate picking this season as he picked LJ Marting from BYU again this week. Jackson also go hit with it by picking Taylen Green as a rusher for the second time this year.

Hollie had the best week out of any of us this week with 29 total points led by Blake Horvath's -348 points. I wonder if that will come back to bite her during the Army/Navy game.

A few other notable performances include me picking Sieh Bangura for my rusher (100 yards, 2 tds), Logan cashing in on UConn QB, Joe Fagnano and his -34 points, Mr. Joey Aguilar (picked by our very own Mike M.) against Kentucky, Spencer's timely Justice Haynes pick, the human body bag, Haynes King (Dario's best pick of the week) and his -94 points, a UConn receiver, Skyler Bell, getting -16 points (Mike G.), Sam snatching USF's Byrum Brown (1 point) as well as Nebraska's Emmett Johnson (Side note, how much does it suck for Nebraska fans now that Dylan Raiaola is out for the year? And yes, I realize this is a week 9 recap and the injury happened in week 10), and Jonathan picking Texas Tech's Jacob Rodriguez as his tackler.
