

How was everyone’s Championship week?!

Mine was spent with two sick children, so that’s always fun. Anyways, did anything this week surprise you? Indiana beating Ohio State? Or specifically, Indiana’s defense cranking down on Ohio State? Tech’s demolition of BYU a second time this year? The amount Georgia won by? How about the playoffs? What are our thoughts on seeding or who made the field? I do want to point out that there was only ONE team that played this week that no one here picked a player from. Buncha haters, this bunch! Any guesses on that team? Answer at the end.

Here’s our updated standings!

We did have more 'No Picks' than usual this week. I hope it's just a symptom of people forgetting that even though the regular season ended, the Stat Game goes on! Also, I'm your new leader, so that's pretty neat.

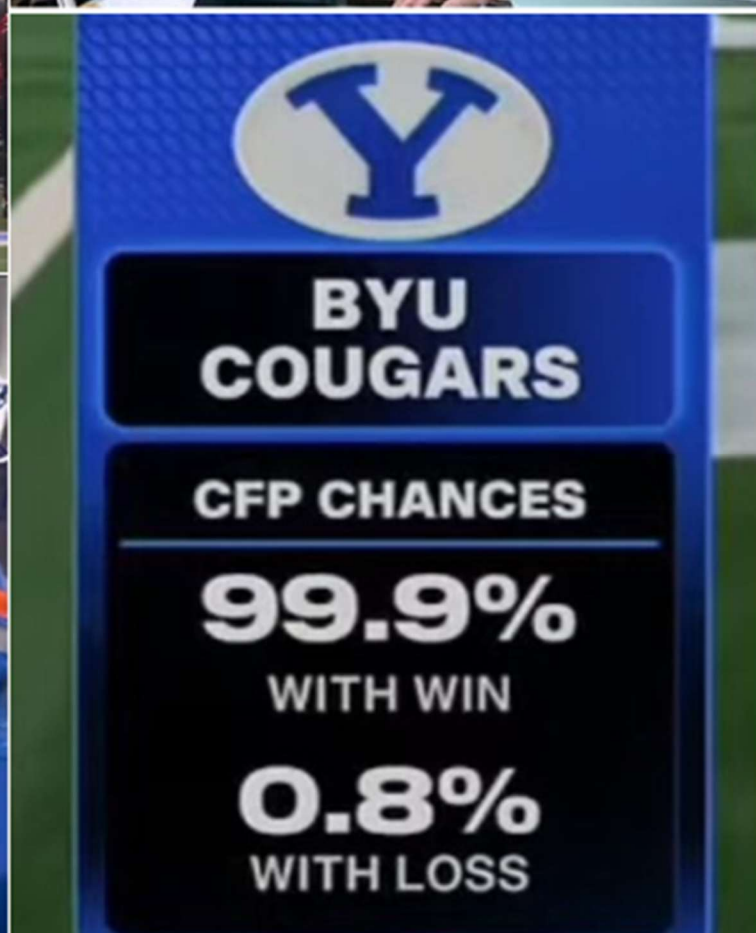

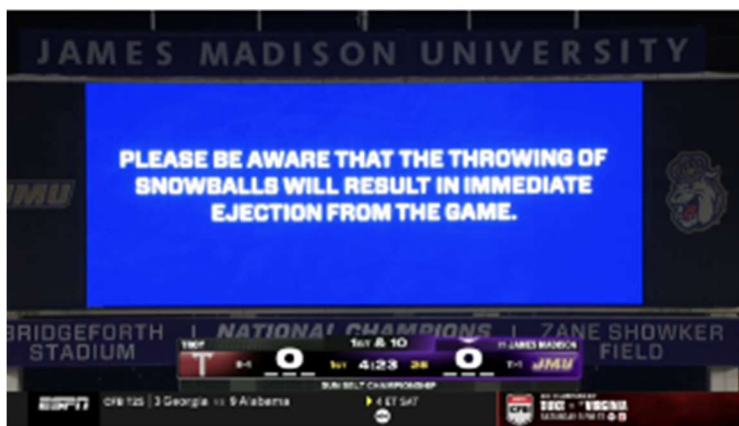

I want to use this space, not to dig in super hard on each individual pick (I know I know, my recaps have gotten shorter and shorter), but to remind everyone of the schedules this upcoming weekend. It does get a little tricky.

This is a reminder that WEEK 16 IN THE STAT GAME IS SOLELY THE ARMY/NAVY GAME. Once again, that's WEEK 16 IN THE STAT GAME IS SOLELY THE ARMY/NAVY GAME.

There is another game this weekend. That would be the Bucked Up LA Bowl Hosted by Gronk (RIP – this bowl game is going away next year). That game is Saturday evening. THIS DOES NOT COUNT TOWARDS WEEK 15.

All bowl games are considered one Stat Game Week. It's the longest week of the season by a lot, and if you pick any playoff matches, you only get credit for the specific game you pick. You don't get a player's aggregate stats through multiple playoff games.

Continue to submit through the app like we have been all season, and do not hesitate to text me. I'm very willing to help you out or clarify anything for you.

All it took for Texas Tech to win a Big 12 championship was for Colorado, Nebraska, Texas A&M, Missouri, Texas and Oklahoma to leave.
