

What's goin' on, gang?!

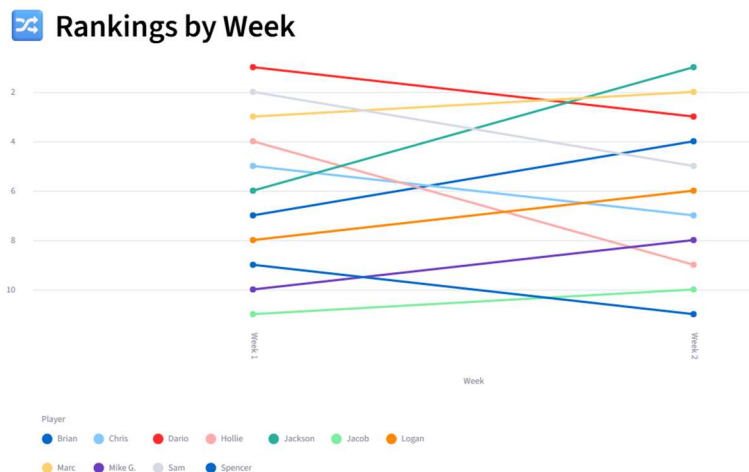

Was that the most normal college football weekend ever? Texas was down 23-3 in the fourth quarter against Ohio State and somehow won 24-23, Oklahoma State beat Oregon one year after Oregon beat them SIXTY-NINE TO THREE, Michigan beat Oklahoma, UTSA scored with 14 seconds left to beat Texas State, and Texas A&M pulled away from Arizona State after I'm pretty sure half of us picked someone involved in that game.

Just another casual Saturday.

Speaking of Texas teams, this HAS to be one of the most Texas-heavy weeks we've ever had. We collectively made eight picks from five different Texas schools: Texas A&M, Texas State, Texas Tech, Texas, and UTSA. And somehow we didn't even get Baylor, TCU, Houston, SMU, North Texas, Rice, or UTEP involved. We've got room to grow.

Anyways, here's where we stand after Week 2:

Rank	Player	Score	Pts. From 1st
1	Jackson	565	0
2	Marc	636	71
3	Dario	730	165
4	Brian	912	347
5	Sam	1,001	436
6	Logan	1,239	674
7	Chris	1,241	676
8	Mike G.	1,359	794
9	Hollie	1,505	940
10	Jacob	1,581	1,016
11	Spencer	1,634	1,069

Jackson went from sixth place to FIRST in one week with a weekly score of 144. That's what happens when Nate Sheppard puts up 147 rushing yards, 41 receiving yards, and three touchdowns for a casual - 194 points. Jeremiah Smith added 164 yards and a touchdown against Texas, and Gunner Stockton threw FIVE touchdowns. Adon Shuler only recording two tackles kept the weekly score from getting truly stupid, but Jackson still had the best week and is now our new overlord.

Marc quietly moved into second place after another solid week. He was the third member of the Nate Sheppard Fan Club, but Trinidad Chambliss also gave him 225 passing yards and two touchdowns against Charlotte. Deuce Alexander added 76 receiving yards, and Noah Mikhail had six tackles against Arizona State. Nothing insane outside of Sheppard, but 419 points is more than enough to keep Marc within striking distance of first place.

My main man Dario falls from first to third, but his week deserves its own documentary.

Sam Leavitt was an AWESOME pick with 344 passing yards, 22 rushing yards, and four total touchdowns for -124 points. Mario Craver caught a touchdown for the Aggies. Cameron Dickey also scored for Texas Tech.

Then we get to Leo Colombi.

Dario selected Leo Colombi as a Notre Dame defender playing against Rice. There was only one small problem: Leo Colombi does not play for Notre Dame. He plays for Miami (OH). Miami (OH) played Holy Cross, an FCS team, so Colombi gets the full 400 points.

The funniest part? Leo Colombi returned a punt for a touchdown!

An objectively incredible pick if literally any part of it counted. Wrong team, wrong opponent, FCS game, full 400 points. No notes. Perfect Stat Game moment.

Brian moves all the way from seventh to fourth behind Nate Sheppard's monster performance. Demond Williams Jr. had 305 combined yards but no touchdowns, which is a really strange way to get 151 points. Umari Hatcher had 77 receiving yards, and Zach Ruffin finished with six tackles. Brian didn't have the flashiest group outside of Sheppard, but 453 points is a very good week.

Sam falls from second to fifth after a pretty boring set of picks. Brad Jackson had 192 passing yards, 39 rushing yards, and two total touchdowns against UTSA, which was good for 128 points. After that, we got 88 total yards from Kamari Moulton, 77 receiving yards from Umari Hatcher, and five tackles from Samuel Omosigho. Nothing catastrophic, but nothing that really moved the needle either. A respectable 935-point helping of mashed potatoes.

Logan got the same -124-point Sam Leavitt performance as Dario, but the rest of the picks couldn't keep up. Nate Frazier had 60 total yards and a touchdown, Ryan Williams only had 43 receiving yards against Kentucky, and Drayk Bowen recorded two tackles against Rice. It's really hard to have a quarterback score -124 and still finish with 730 points, but that's why we play the game.

Chris had a very similar week. Trinidad Chambliss was solid, Mario Craver caught a touchdown for the Aggies, and Arion Carter had eight tackles for Tennessee. Unfortunately, Aneyas Williams only ran for 29 yards against Rice. As previously established, Notre Dame apparently forgot it could run the ball at some point and has simply decided to stick with that philosophy.

Mike G. had four extremely Mike G. picks. Brad Jackson was solid against UTSA, Jamal Rule had 88 rushing yards and a touchdown, Umari Hatcher had 77 receiving yards, and Dorian Pringle recorded seven tackles. No disasters, no cheat codes, just a steady 723-point week. Mike moves from tenth to eighth because other people graciously decided to implode around him.

Hollie had our worst week among people who actually submitted picks, finishing with 1,275 points. She doubled down on Charlotte against Ole Miss with Cole Gonzales and Khamani Alexander, who combined for 140 yards and zero touchdowns. DJ Allen had 24 receiving yards for UTSA, and Zach Mowchan recorded five tackles. All four players scored at least 272 points. That's honestly impressive consistency, just in the exact wrong direction. She falls from fourth to ninth.

I had a perfectly mediocre week, which I will gladly accept after last week's garbage. Dante Moore had 191 passing yards, two touchdowns, and negative-nine rushing yards while Oregon somehow lost to Oklahoma State. Jamal Rule ran for 88 yards and a touchdown, Cam'ron Lacy had 81 total yards and a touchdown, and Dorian Pringle recorded seven tackles. A weekly score of 654 moves me out of last place, so I'm basically unstoppable now.

Lastly, we have Spencer.

John Mateer had 234 total yards and a touchdown in Oklahoma's loss to Michigan. LJ Martin had 125 total yards. Ryan Wingo caught a touchdown for Texas, which means Spencer benefited from picking a Longhorn and should feel bad about it.

Then there's Kip Lewis.

Lewis injured his knee in the first quarter against Michigan and didn't record a single statistic before leaving the game. That means Spencer gets the full 400 points. Unlike the Leo Colombi situation, the player, school, and opponent were all correct here. Spencer just got hit with our first legitimate injury 400 of the season.

Between Wingo being a Longhorn and Kip Lewis getting hurt immediately, this week was spiritually doomed from the beginning.

Now for Chapa, Ian, Mike M., and Jonathan...

Did y'all quit?

I'm not officially calling you quitters yet, but I am heavily implying it. Anyone who missed picks can absolutely still play and catch up—it's Week 2 and one great week can move someone six spots, as Jackson just demonstrated. But if you're not planning to play this year, let me know so I can stop publicly shaming you in these recaps.

Actually, I might keep publicly shaming you either way.

As always, send me your picks for this week and good luck!

WEEK 2  +933mi
at TEXAS A&M

WEEK 3  +5259mi
vs KANSAS (LONDON)

WEEK 7  +579mi
at TEXAS TECH

0

