What's goin' on, gang?!
We have a new leader!
Someone who understands preparation. Someone who studies the matchups. Someone who has spent years developing an advanced understanding of this beautiful game. Someone who had an entire conversation about a player being injured without remembering HE ALSO PICKED THAT PLAYER.
It's me. I'm that idiot. And somehow I'm in first place.

Before we get into that, what a weekend. BYU lost to UCF in double overtime, Cincinnati beat Texas Tech, South Carolina beat Tennessee, Wisconsin beat USC, and A&M briefly led Alabama in the second half just to make absolutely sure I hadn't gotten too comfortable with my emotional detachment.

Anyways, here's where we stand after Week 8:

Rank	Player	Score	Pts. From 1st
1	Jacob	2,899	0
2	Sam	3,249	350
3	Mike G.	4,065	1,166
4	Marc	4,237	1,338
5	Logan	4,263	1,364
6	Brian	4,324	1,425
7	Chris	4,517	1,618
8	Dario	4,805	1,906
9	Jackson	4,904	2,005
10	Spencer	5,022	2,123
11	Hollie	6,197	3,298

Yours truly had the best score of the week with 160 points and has officially completed the climb from dead last to first! Malachi Toney was absolutely ridiculous against Pittsburgh with 194 receiving yards and THREE touchdowns for -288 points. Jaden Craig threw for 372 yards and accounted for two touchdowns for -52, while Sione Hala recorded 12 tackles. But let's talk about Jacurri Brown. Mike G. texted me his Brown pick because Brown wasn't available in the submission form. Brown was injured and didn't play, so Mikey and I had a whole conversation about how much that sucks. I was sympathetic. Understanding. Really felt for the guy. I DID NOT EVEN REALIZE OR REMEMBER THAT I HAD ALSO PICKED JACURRI BROWN. We were having a shared experience and only one of us knew it. So we both got the full 400 points. To make matters worse, Rice's replacement quarterback, Gael Ochoa, ran for 259 yards and FOUR touchdowns while throwing another touchdown. We picked the right offense and the wrong human. Despite all that, I won the week by 464 points. Thank you, Malachi Toney. You are invited to Thanksgiving.

Sam drops to second after a 763-point week. Tayven Jackson threw for 305 yards and three touchdowns for FIVE points, and Sione Hala added his 12 tackles. Unfortunately, Torrance Burgess Jr. only ran for 51 yards and Ed Small caught 20 yards. Those two combined for 658 points, which was enough to surrender the lead. Sam is still only 290 points behind me, though. Given everything we just discussed about my investigative abilities, I wouldn't be particularly intimidated.

Mike G. holds onto third place despite joining me in the Jacurri Brown experience. Darian Mensah threw for 387 yards and four touchdowns for -107 points, Wyatt Young had 78 receiving yards and a touchdown, and Jordan Castell recorded eight tackles. Three perfectly respectable picks and one injured guy. Mikey finished with 637 points, the third-best score of the week. Without Brown's 400, this would've been an awesome week. Instead, he gets to share a support group with the commissioner.

Marc jumps from seventh to fourth with the second-best score of the week! DeSean Bishop ran for 120 yards and a touchdown (Tennessee is just gonna grind him down with 35 carries per game, aren't they?), Alberto Mendoza threw for 186 yards and a touchdown, and Jordan Allen caught 85 yards. Nothing spectacular offensively, but nothing that completely destroyed the week either. Then Marc picked Caleb Woodson AGAINST THE AGGIES and got 10 tackles for 150 points. Traitor.

Chris moves from sixth to fifth despite committing another duplicate offense. Trinidad Chambliss threw for 250 yards and two touchdowns against Texas. That would've been worth 90 points. Pretty solid! Except Chris already picked Chambliss in Week 2. Full 400 points. That's a 310-point penalty and the difference between sitting in third place and sitting in fifth. Cole Tabb did everything he could to cover for Chris with 173 rushing yards, a rushing touchdown, and a receiving touchdown for -146 points. Rasheem Biles added an interception, but Trent Mosley only caught 45 yards. Chris, I'm thrilled you're moving up the standings, but I am once again asking you to look at your previous picks.

Logan drops from fourth to sixth after an 828-point week. DeSean Bishop was good with his 120 rushing yards and a touchdown, and Jordan Dwyer had 113 receiving yards.

Josh Hoover, however, threw for only 81 yards against Michigan while playing through an injury. A rushing touchdown helped salvage his score a little, but 269 points from your passer is tough. Ta'Shawn James only recording three tackles didn't help either. The good news? Logan is only 26 points away from fourth place. Marc, Chris, Logan, and Brian are separated by eighty-seven total points. That's basically nothing. One tackler finding himself near the football a few extra times could rearrange this whole group.

Brian falls from fifth to seventh after an 818-point week. Devon Dampier had 150 rushing yards and two rushing touchdowns, which is awesome in real life but probably left Brian wishing he'd selected him as a rusher instead of a passer. Wayne Knight scored a touchdown, Dorian Pringle recorded eight tackles, and KJ Duff caught 33 yards. Duff had 113 yards and two touchdowns when Marc picked him last week. This week, he got Brian and Spencer 334 points each. That's a tough way to learn that last week's stats don't count again.

Dario stays in eighth after having the worst score of the week. Josh Hoover's 81 passing yards hurt here too, Charlie Becker caught 32 yards, Wayne Knight ran for 56 yards and a touchdown, and Jordan Castell recorded eight tackles. Every pick scored at least 188 points. No duplicates. No one completely failed to record a stat. Just a 993-point collection of football that nobody particularly enjoyed.

Jackson stays in ninth after a rough week. He went heavy on Kentucky with Kenny Minchey, CJ Baxter Jr., and Jordan Castell. Minchey accounted for two touchdowns and Castell recorded eight tackles, but Baxter left with an injury after managing only three rushing yards and five receiving yards. That's a brutal 394 points. Deuce Alexander added 87 receiving yards without a touchdown against Texas, leaving Jackson with 937 points overall. At least Kentucky won. That's gotta be worth something emotionally, because it wasn't worth much statistically.

Spencer remains in tenth with 725 points. Darian Mensah was excellent with 387 passing yards and four touchdowns for -107 points. Unfortunately, Torrance Burgess Jr. and KJ Duff combined for 632 points, while Kevin Adams recorded eight tackles. Mensah did all that work just to watch the rest of the lineup slowly hand it back. Spencer is only 118 points behind Jackson, though, so that's a very manageable gap. One good week and we could have some movement down here.

Lastly, Hollie apparently has a personal vendetta against Kennesaw State. Goddamn Owls.
Last week, she picked Missouri State receiver Isaiah Myers against them and got 135 yards and two touchdowns. This week, she went right back to the "who's playing Kennesaw State?" strategy with Liberty's Makai Jackson. Twenty-five yards. No touchdowns. Three hundred and fifty points.
Apparently Kennesaw State watched the tape of last week's recap and made adjustments.
CJ Bailey was good with 256 passing yards and two touchdowns, Justice Haynes scored a rushing touchdown, and EJ Smith recorded five tackles. Hollie finished with 903 points and remains in 11th.
I'm interested to see whether she finds another receiver playing Kennesaw State this week or decides the rivalry has run its course.

We've got a new leader, an 87-point traffic jam from fourth through seventh, another duplicate, and a commissioner who can hold a conversation about an injured player without realizing he is personally affected.

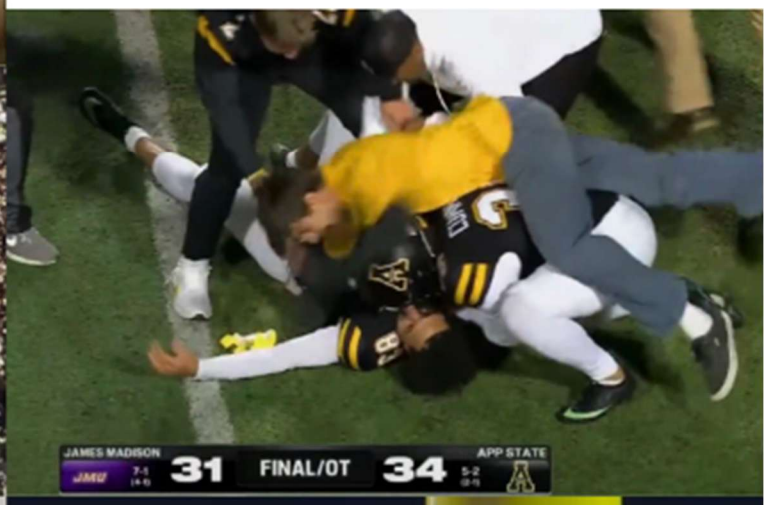

The game is in excellent hands.

Don't forget to send me your Week 9 picks. Preferably players who are playing. Preferably players you haven't already picked.

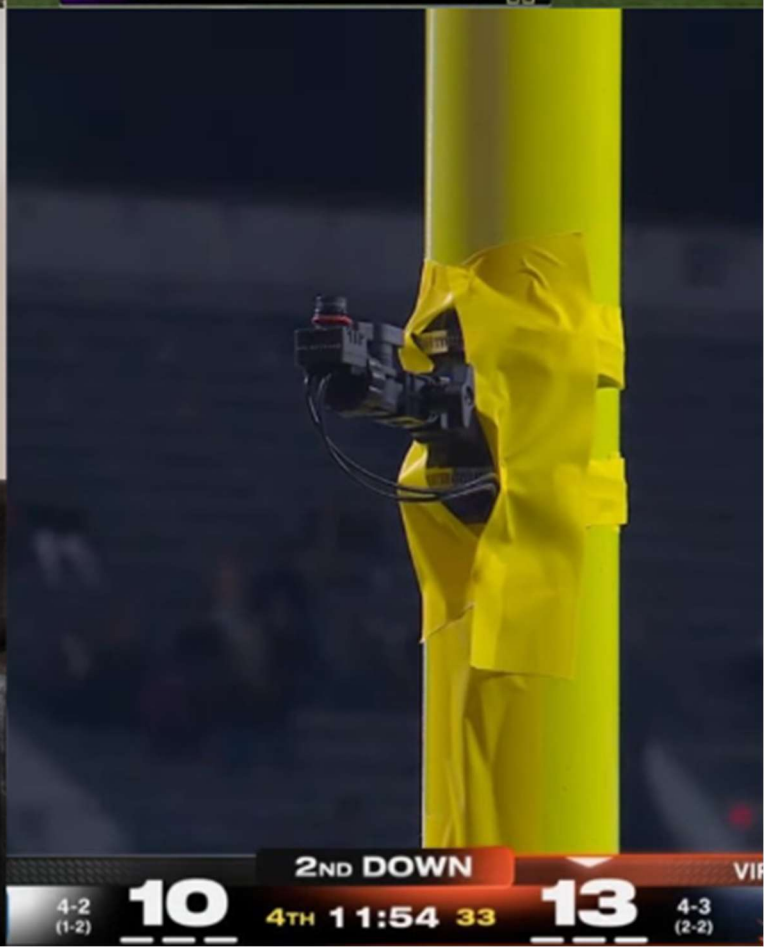

Good luck this weekend!

When CJ Carr goes to watch his brother Tommy Carr play, it's a great story. But when a friend of mine goes to watch my son Ryan Day play, Pete Thamel throws a fit.
