What's goin' on, gang?!

Halloween weekend provided exactly the kind of nonsense you'd expect. USC beat Ohio State, Iowa State and Oklahoma State combined for ONE HUNDRED points, Miami barely escaped North Carolina, and Iowa shut out Wisconsin because apparently the Big Ten has decided to get back to its roots.
A&M was on a bye, which meant I got to enjoy other people's problems for a change. Highly recommend. More importantly, we made it through an entire week without a duplicate pick! Personal growth. Proud of us. That doesn't mean everyone's players actually did anything, but we'll get there.

Here's where we stand after Week 9:

Rank	Player	Score	Pts. From 1st
1	Jacob	3,000	0
2	Sam	3,573	573
3	Logan	4,123	1,123
4	Marc	4,622	1,622
5	Mike G.	4,781	1,781
6	Brian	5,056	2,056
7	Spencer	5,100	2,100
8	Chris	5,314	2,314
9	Dario	5,489	2,489
10	Jackson	5,665	2,665
11	Hollie	6,856	3,856

Yours truly holds onto first place after the third-best score of the week with 101 points! Jahiem White ran for 193 yards and two touchdowns against FAU for -186 points. Gavin Freeman added 114 receiving yards and a touchdown on Friday night, Lincoln Kienholz accounted for three touchdowns, and Nicholas Rodriguez recorded nine tackles. Four productive football players. No one injured. No lengthy conversation about someone not playing while forgetting I also picked him. A very professional operation this week.

My lead over Sam is now 513 points, which feels substantial until you remember that one injured player and one receiver having a normal bad day can erase that in about three hours. Sam stays in second with 324 points. Drew Mestemaker threw FIVE touchdowns against Iowa State for -73 points, while Carlos Hernandez had 136 receiving yards and a touchdown for 28. Wayne Knight scored a receiving touchdown, and Nicholas Rodriguez recorded nine tackles. Nothing disastrous anywhere. Just a good week that unfortunately happened while a few other people were having REALLY good weeks. Also, Mestemaker threw five touchdowns and Oklahoma State still lost 51-49. Imagine doing all that just to watch your defense let Iowa State score fifty-one points. That's gotta be exhausting.

Logan had the best score of the week and jumped from sixth all the way back onto the podium! Aiden Flora (shoutout Aiden Flora who's on my Fantasy Team) ran for 221 yards and two touchdowns in that Iowa State/Oklahoma State track meet for -242 points. Noah Fifita threw for 417 yards and a touchdown for -47. Then Chris Cole recorded nine tackles and a 66 yard scoop-and-score that got Logan -225 points. Those three picks combined for -514. Isaiah Sategna, however, caught 13 yards for 374 points and tried his absolute hardest to ruin the whole thing. Logan still finished with -140 points and won the week by 218. That's an incredible week considering one of his players basically showed up, stretched, and went home.

Marc holds steady in fourth after a 385-point week. Ashton Daniels threw for 350 yards and accounted for three touchdowns against Clemson for -60 points, while Myles Graham recorded seven tackles and a fumble recovery for 25. Horatio Fields caught a touchdown against Auburn, but Dwight Phillips Jr. only ran for 67 yards without scoring. Marc picked a Georgia rusher and a Florida tackler in the same game, so I appreciate him giving himself a reason to be emotionally conflicted on every handoff.

Mike G. drops from third to fifth after a 716-point week. Lincoln Kienholz was good with his three total touchdowns, Wayne Knight caught a touchdown, and Cam Buffington recorded eight tackles. Deuce Alexander had 59 receiving yards without a touchdown for 282 points. Nothing catastrophic, but nothing that really helped Mikey keep pace with Logan's nonsense either. After last week's Jacurri Brown experience, I'm just pleased all four of his players participated (he says, ignoring the fact he also picked Jacurri Brown).

Brian moves up one spot to sixth with 732 points. Kienholz was also his best pick at 40 points, while Kendrick Raphael had 51 rushing yards and a touchdown.
Cayden Lee caught 78 yards without scoring, and Ethan Wesloski recorded six tackles in a game where his team allowed 51 points.

I'm not blaming Wesloski personally, but it feels like there should've been plenty of opportunities. Brian now leads Spencer by only 44 points. Which brings us to...

Spencer! What got into you?! The second-best score of the week at 78 points moves Spencer from tenth to seventh. Nate Sheppard ran for 97 yards and FIVE touchdowns. That's -294 points from a guy who didn't even rush for 100 yards. An absurd stat line. Every time Duke got near the end zone, apparently the entire playbook was just a picture of Nate Sheppard. Drew Mestemaker added his five passing touchdowns, meaning Spencer's passer and rusher combined for TEN touchdowns.
Umari Hatcher only caught 65 yards, and EJ Smith recorded nine tackles, but the touchdowns did more than enough work. Spencer is now only 214 points out of fifth place. That part of the standings is getting crowded.

Chris drops from fifth to eighth with the worst score of the week at 1,061 points. We have two full 400s, but they arrived in very different ways. Ja'Kyrian Turner was dealing with a lower-body injury, went through warmups, and ultimately didn't play against Georgia Tech. Brutal, but at least there's an explanation. Nik McMillan played against TCU. He just didn't catch anything. Same score. Completely different emotional journey. Austin Simmons threw for 179 yards and two touchdowns, and Jackson Forrest recorded 12 tackles. Forrest did his part, but two 400s is a lot for one tackler to clean up. No duplicate this week, though. Credit where it's due.

My main man, Dario, drops one spot to ninth after a very Dario-looking collection of picks.
Gio Lopez had 293 total yards but only one touchdown, Wayshawn Parker ran for 82 yards and scored, Deuce Alexander caught 59 yards, and Donovan Woolen recorded 11 tackles. Nobody completely disappeared. Nobody went nuts. A 684-point week that leaves me struggling to find something mean to say. Dario also picked a North Dakota State defender against UTEP, which means at least some of us are watching a VERY different set of games on Saturdays.

Jackson falls to tenth after a 761-point week. Noah Fifita throwing for 417 yards was awesome, and Kendrick Raphael scored a touchdown. Unfortunately, Jesse Legree only caught 70 yards without scoring, and Kingston Lopa recorded two tackles. Legree spent the last month making everyone else look like geniuses, then Jackson finally picked him and got 260 points. That feels personal. Also, remember when Lopa was leading the country in interceptions? Two tackles and no turnovers is a pretty disappointing return on that reputation.

Lastly, Hollie has apparently negotiated a ceasefire with Kennesaw State. After two consecutive weeks picking receivers against them, she moved on to Louisiana Tech's Jalen Mickens against South Alabama. He caught a touchdown but only had 32 receiving yards, so that got her 236 points. Drew Mestemaker's five touchdowns were the highlight at -73 points. Jalen Buckley ran for 77 yards without scoring, and Sione Hala recorded six tackles. A 659-point week was actually better than five other people, so I'll ease up a little. She's still in last, but at least she's making other people earn their roast paragraphs.
We're into November now, which means the season is somehow flying by and we're running out of opportunities to pretend we're going to start picking tacklers better.

Logan is back on the podium. Spencer is making a move. Chris discovered two different ways to get 400 points without picking anyone twice.

And I'm still in first, so clearly everything is working exactly as intended.

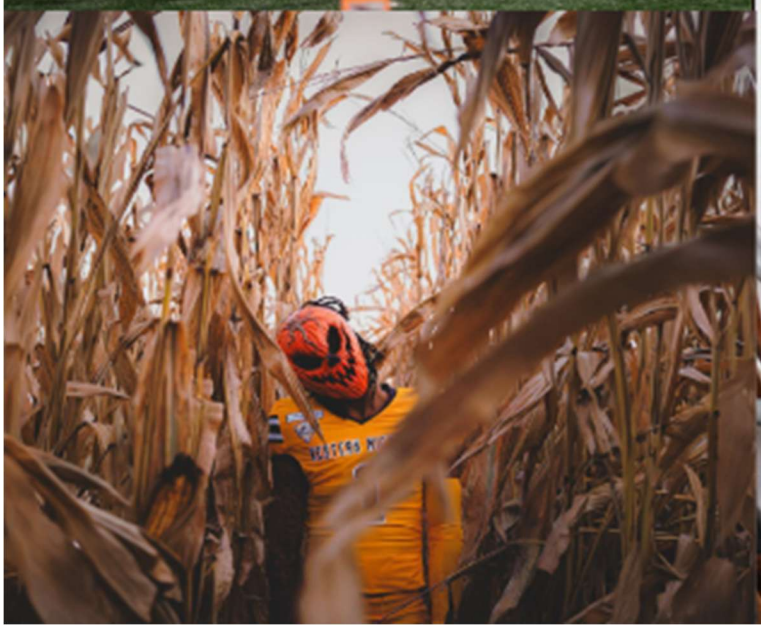

Don't forget to send me your Week 10 picks, check the injury reports, and good luck this weekend!
